WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. military said Fri-
Saturday it had started pulling remaining troops
from Syria, as first step in a withdrawal plan promised by President Donald Trump. The move was announced after a meeting of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, including Secretary of Defense Mark Pompeo said. "Let me be clear: America will not withdraw until a stable, enduring solution is in place to counter to IS in Syria and elsewhere.
"We have no plans to pull out of Syria,
Pompeo said.
"We want to make sure that the terror is cut off," Pompeo said.

Avalanches, accidents bring Europe’s winter death toll to 21

BELGRADE, Serbia (AP) — At least 15 people were killed in avalanches in the Balkan mountains,
mostly the result of human error, as a string of snowslides and avalanches that started in late winter continued to kill and injure people in Europe.

"The steeple of the Loferer church is seen through the snow
in Lofer, in the Austrian province of Salzburg, on Friday after
a heavy snowfall."

In this April 4 photo, a U.S. soldier, left, sits on an army vehicle near the Turkish-Syrian border at the town of Deyr-Pazir, in the northeastern Hasakeh province of Syria.

USA starts withdrawing supplies, not troops, from Syria

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. military said Fri-
Saturday it had started pulling remaining troops
from Syria, as first step in a withdrawal plan
promised by President Donald Trump. The move
was announced after a meeting of the Joint Chiefs
of Staff, including Secretary of Defense Mark Pompeo said. "Let me be clear: America will not
withdraw until a stable, enduring solution is in place to counter to IS in Syria and elsewhere.
"We have no plans to pull out of Syria,
Pompeo said.
"We want to make sure that the
terror is cut off," Pompeo said.

Avalanches, accidents bring Europe’s winter death toll to 21

BELGRADE, Serbia (AP) — At least 15 people
were killed in avalanches in the Balkan mountains,
mostly the result of human error, as a string of snowslides and avalanches that started in late
winter continued to kill and injure people in Europe.

"The steeple of the Loferer church is seen through the snow
in Lofer, in the Austrian province of Salzburg, on Friday after
a heavy snowfall."

In this April 4 photo, a U.S. soldier, left, sits on an army vehicle near the Turkish-Syrian border at the town of Deyr-Pazir, in the northeastern Hasakeh province of Syria.

USA starts withdrawing supplies, not troops, from Syria

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. military said Fri-
Saturday it had started pulling remaining troops
from Syria, as first step in a withdrawal plan
promised by President Donald Trump. The move
was announced after a meeting of the Joint Chiefs
of Staff, including Secretary of Defense Mark Pompeo said. "Let me be clear: America will not
withdraw until a stable, enduring solution is in place to counter to IS in Syria and elsewhere.
"We have no plans to pull out of Syria,
Pompeo said.
"We want to make sure that the
terror is cut off," Pompeo said.

Avalanches, accidents bring Europe’s winter death toll to 21

BELGRADE, Serbia (AP) — At least 15 people
were killed in avalanches in the Balkan mountains,
mostly the result of human error, as a string of snowslides and avalanches that started in late
winter continued to kill and injure people in Europe.

"The steeple of the Loferer church is seen through the snow
in Lofer, in the Austrian province of Salzburg, on Friday after
a heavy snowfall."

In this April 4 photo, a U.S. soldier, left, sits on an army vehicle near the Turkish-Syrian border at the town of Deyr-Pazir, in the northeastern Hasakeh province of Syria.