Dillman earns Eagle rank

New sidewalks along Haven Road funded by grant

A state grant will help pay for new sidewalks along Haven Road to improve safety for children walking to and from schools.

The Hagerstown City Council on Thursday voted to support the $95,000 project, which will receive a $44,000 match from Maryland State Highway Administration’s Safe Routes to Schools grant.

The city will provide a total of $51,000 from its share of Transportation and Utilities Act. The project will include a new sidewalk from Long Scholar Elementary School to Fountaindale Elementary School.

BRANDON WADE DILLMAN

The city will also improve sidewalks at four schools: Long Scholar, Fountaindale Elementary, Northwood Middle School and Hagerstown High School.

A state grant will help pay for new sidewalks along Haven Road to improve safety for children walking to and from schools.

The Hagerstown City Council on Thursday voted to support the $95,000 project, which will receive a $44,000 match from Maryland State Highway Administration’s Safe Routes to Schools grant.

The city will provide a total of $51,000 from its share of Transportation and Utilities Act. The project will include a new sidewalk from Long Scholar Elementary School to Fountaindale Elementary School.

BRANDON WADE DILLMAN

The city will also improve sidewalks at four schools: Long Scholar, Fountaindale Elementary, Northwood Middle School and Hagerstown High School.

A state grant will help pay for new sidewalks along Haven Road to improve safety for children walking to and from schools.

The Hagerstown City Council on Thursday voted to support the $95,000 project, which will receive a $44,000 match from Maryland State Highway Administration’s Safe Routes to Schools grant.

The city will provide a total of $51,000 from its share of Transportation and Utilities Act. The project will include a new sidewalk from Long Scholar Elementary School to Fountaindale Elementary School.

BRANDON WADE DILLMAN

The city will also improve sidewalks at four schools: Long Scholar, Fountaindale Elementary, Northwood Middle School and Hagerstown High School.

A state grant will help pay for new sidewalks along Haven Road to improve safety for children walking to and from schools.

The Hagerstown City Council on Thursday voted to support the $95,000 project, which will receive a $44,000 match from Maryland State Highway Administration’s Safe Routes to Schools grant.

The city will provide a total of $51,000 from its share of Transportation and Utilities Act. The project will include a new sidewalk from Long Scholar Elementary School to Fountaindale Elementary School.

BRANDON WADE DILLMAN

The city will also improve sidewalks at four schools: Long Scholar, Fountaindale Elementary, Northwood Middle School and Hagerstown High School.

A state grant will help pay for new sidewalks along Haven Road to improve safety for children walking to and from schools.

The Hagerstown City Council on Thursday voted to support the $95,000 project, which will receive a $44,000 match from Maryland State Highway Administration’s Safe Routes to Schools grant.

The city will provide a total of $51,000 from its share of Transportation and Utilities Act. The project will include a new sidewalk from Long Scholar Elementary School to Fountaindale Elementary School.

BRANDON WADE DILLMAN

The city will also improve sidewalks at four schools: Long Scholar, Fountaindale Elementary, Northwood Middle School and Hagerstown High School.

A state grant will help pay for new sidewalks along Haven Road to improve safety for children walking to and from schools.

The Hagerstown City Council on Thursday voted to support the $95,000 project, which will receive a $44,000 match from Maryland State Highway Administration’s Safe Routes to Schools grant.

The city will provide a total of $51,000 from its share of Transportation and Utilities Act. The project will include a new sidewalk from Long Scholar Elementary School to Fountaindale Elementary School.

BRANDON WADE DILLMAN

The city will also improve sidewalks at four schools: Long Scholar, Fountaindale Elementary, Northwood Middle School and Hagerstown High School.

A state grant will help pay for new sidewalks along Haven Road to improve safety for children walking to and from schools.

The Hagerstown City Council on Thursday voted to support the $95,000 project, which will receive a $44,000 match from Maryland State Highway Administration’s Safe Routes to Schools grant.

The city will provide a total of $51,000 from its share of Transportation and Utilities Act. The project will include a new sidewalk from Long Scholar Elementary School to Fountaindale Elementary School.

BRANDON WADE DILLMAN

The city will also improve sidewalks at four schools: Long Scholar, Fountaindale Elementary, Northwood Middle School and Hagerstown High School.

A state grant will help pay for new sidewalks along Haven Road to improve safety for children walking to and from schools.

The Hagerstown City Council on Thursday voted to support the $95,000 project, which will receive a $44,000 match from Maryland State Highway Administration’s Safe Routes to Schools grant.

The city will provide a total of $51,000 from its share of Transportation and Utilities Act. The project will include a new sidewalk from Long Scholar Elementary School to Fountaindale Elementary School.

BRANDON WADE DILLMAN

The city will also improve sidewalks at four schools: Long Scholar, Fountaindale Elementary, Northwood Middle School and Hagerstown High School.

A state grant will help pay for new sidewalks along Haven Road to improve safety for children walking to and from schools.

The Hagerstown City Council on Thursday voted to support the $95,000 project, which will receive a $44,000 match from Maryland State Highway Administration’s Safe Routes to Schools grant.

The city will provide a total of $51,000 from its share of Transportation and Utilities Act. The project will include a new sidewalk from Long Scholar Elementary School to Fountaindale Elementary School.

BRANDON WADE DILLMAN

The city will also improve sidewalks at four schools: Long Scholar, Fountaindale Elementary, Northwood Middle School and Hagerstown High School.

A state grant will help pay for new sidewalks along Haven Road to improve safety for children walking to and from schools.

The Hagerstown City Council on Thursday voted to support the $95,000 project, which will receive a $44,000 match from Maryland State Highway Administration’s Safe Routes to Schools grant.

The city will provide a total of $51,000 from its share of Transportation and Utilities Act. The project will include a new sidewalk from Long Scholar Elementary School to Fountaindale Elementary School.

BRANDON WADE DILLMAN

The city will also improve sidewalks at four schools: Long Scholar, Fountaindale Elementary, Northwood Middle School and Hagerstown High School.